Tax Commission Ignores Secrecy Clause In Plans

Urge Removal Of Personal Property Tax Offset To Incomes

WOULD TAX BANK DIVIDENDS

Other Changes In Revenue Laws For State Suggested To Governor Blaine

By Associated Press
Madison—Removal of the personal property tax offset to the income tax, law amendment to the constitution to remove the uniformity provision with regard to taxation, increase in income tax rates, reapportionment of the returns from the income tax, and taxation of bank dividends, are among the recommendations made by the Wisconsin Tax commission Wednesday in its report to Governor J. J. Blaine, proposing changes in the present state revenue laws.

FORGET SECRECY CLAUSE
The commission report contains no mention of the secrecy clause to the income tax law, either to recommend its repeal or to suggest that it be retained. Repeal of this provision of the income tax law was one of the outstanding issues developed during the last political campaign, and is to be requested by Governor Blaine in his first message to the legislature.

An outline of the tax commission recommendations follows:
Repeal of the constitutional provisions requiring that "the rule of taxation shall be uniform," to enable taxation of stocks, bonds and evidences of indebtedness on a different basis than taxation of incomes, and to provide for reduced taxes on homestead improvements.

WORLD DOUBLE REVENUE
Repeal of the personal property offset to the income tax law, which would result in a practical doubling of the income taxes, or if unwilling to make this change the commission suggests that a law be passed limiting the use of the offset, that the offset be permitted only in cases when both the personal property tax and the income tax are payable in the same district, and that no personal property tax offset be allowed in payment of income taxes assessed on unreported and untaxed income of previous years.

Increase in income tax rates established a flat tax of 8 or 10 per cent of individuals and fiduciaries over $10,000, and instead of a graduated rate on corporations and partnerships income, a flat rate of 5 or 6 per cent.

Reapportionment of the income tax returns so that the state receives a larger share than the present 10 per cent permitted by the statutes, and is enabled to use the tax for some specific purposes.

SUGGEST "PROBE" FUND
Appropriation of $100,000 to the tax commission for investigation of unreported income of both individuals and corporations.

Taxation of bank dividends, now exempted.

Mystery Shrouds Disappearance Of Tug—Continue Hopeless Search

By Associated Press
Cleveland—Although practically no hope is held out for the safety of the tug Cornell, formerly the Grace Danforth, search of Lake Erie in an effort to solve the mystery surrounding the disappearance of the vessel was continued Wednesday. Findings of a life boat containing the frozen body of Michael Faytosh, one of the eight members of the crew, dispelled any belief that the Cornell is safe. The yawl and its contents were picked up Tuesday by the Q. A. Gill, more, one of the tugs assisting in the search, as she cruised in the regular "Buffalo course" along the Canadian coast between Port Colborne and Long Point.

LODGE LEADS SENATE WAR ON WORLD PARLEY

Attacks Borah's Amendment Urging Call Of Economic-Armament Session

Washington—Administration senators, under the leadership of Chairman Lodge of the foreign relations committee, began in the senate Wednesday a determined fight against the proposal of Senator Borah, Republican Idaho for a new international conference in Washington to discuss economic conditions and disarmament.

Senator Lodge, who was said by his colleagues to have ascertained the views of President Harding and his administration advisers, opened his attack as soon as the senate began work on the Borah proposal, which is in the form of an amendment to the annual naval bill, requesting the president to call an economic and armaments conference.

SENATE FIGHT BEGINS
The fight on the senate floor began after a score of administration senators had conferred in Senator Lodge's office and mapped out a program providing for a resort to parliamentary tactics if necessary to defeat the move by Senator Borah.

A part of the senate irreconcilables who have voted with Mr. Borah on many other questions of foreign policy, also was arrayed against his amendment, while the attitude of the Democratic side of the chamber seemed to be waiting one, with many members undecided whether to support or oppose the conference plan.

Senator Lodge recited that the conduct of foreign affairs was in the hands of the president and that he would not be bound to accept any advice offered by the senate although, as almost any president would give weight to senatorial advice.

Reviewing the work of the Washington arms conference, the Republican leader recited that Senator Borah had told the conference that France could not consent to any limitation of land armament.

Turning to the provisions in the naval bill as passed by the house and in the Borah amendment for a move to limit the building of naval vessels of 10,000 tons and less, Senator Lodge pointed out that the Washington conference "was unable to do that because of the objections of France and other powers."

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1922, by the Post, Pub. Co.
Washington—Opposition to Senator Borah's proposal for an international economic conference is not aimed at the principle of a conference to restore economic normalcy in Europe and the world generally but at the timeliness of the measure.

Administration senators who are lining up against the Borah resolution which would authorize the president to summon an international economic conference have been advised privately that the executive branch of the government already has been discussing the project with other powers and that action by the senate at this time might be construed as committing the United States government to a course of action which it might otherwise be free to avoid.

REPETITION OF EVENTS
Curiously enough, Mr. Borah's proposal and the circumstances which surround it are almost identical with the situation which existed before Mr. Harding called the conference on Pacific problems and reduction of armament. The president was in negotiation with other governments when Mr. Borah's resolution was projected and it looked to the outside world as if the Idaho senator had driven the president into the course he finally took. The record at the department of state will show that the subject was being discussed in diplomatic channels long before it was mentioned in the senate.

Mr. Harding is not adverse to the idea of an international economic conference. The belief for the moment at any rate is that an economic conference would be futile unless it is preceded by a conference of premiers or ambassadors empowered to clear up the political relations of Europe. Until such an atmosphere prevails the bickerings over the economic problems would probably get no further than they have heretofore.

AFFECTING AMERICA
The United States would be glad to attend a conference to stabilize the political relations of European and American nations through an agreement to limit land armament. It would go somewhat against the grain to rush headlong into a political conference which would merely arrange another balance of power. But the

Hold $30,000 Madison Santa On Fraud Charge

By Associated Press
New York—Victor H. Arnold, bank-er-preacher, arrested at Bayside, L. I., Tuesday night on an indictment returned in Madison, Wis., charging using the mails to defraud, was still in jail in Brooklyn Wednesday.

Bail was set at $25,000 when the exponent of simplified Christianity, on which he lectured in the Town hall here was arraigned immediately after his arrest. The former head of the insolvent Madison Bond company was unable to produce this sum Tuesday night, but announced he would try to do so later.

Mrs. Arnold is standing behind her husband, asserting that two men to save themselves, had caused his troubles.

MADISON AGAG
Madison—Erstwhile clients of Victor H. Arnold, former president of the insolvent Madison Bond company, arrested in Bayside, N. Y., on a charge of using the mails to defraud, Wednesday expectedly awaited his return here for trial.

Meanwhile the sensational career of Arnold during his residence in the city was the topic of conversation in all circles.

His personification of Santa Claus during the 1921 Christmas season, when he was said to have expended $30,000 for gifts to the poor, was recalled. Harkening back to his first claim to fame locally, residents remembered the visits of Norma Talmadge, film actress, with two of Arnold's daughters. The Arnold home was one of the social centers of the town.

Arnold was indicted Wednesday by the federal grand jury for the eastern district of Wisconsin investigating his transactions in the bond company business.

DROPS CHARGES
The bond company started on its path to bankruptcy in 1921 when Arnold publicly charged certain officials with embezzlement of funds and asked stockholders to turn their stocks over to him for his personal note to aid the firm over a critical period. The charges made by Arnold were dropped.

Later the bond company bought a church for an office and undertook business on a larger scale and Arnold took the pulpit in local churches, lecturing on Christianity in business. In March this year, Marshall Cousins, commissioner of banking for Wisconsin appointed a committee to investigate Arnold's affairs and bankruptcy followed.

Arnold departed from Madison then and took up residence in Bayside. Arnold will be arraigned in the January terms of the United States court when it meets in Superior, unless successful in a fight against removal to Wisconsin. District Attorney W. H. Dougherty declared Wednesday. Following arraignment at Superior, providing Arnold enters a plea of not guilty, his trial will be set for the next term of the federal court in Madison on the first Tuesday in March, according to the district attorney.

BRITAIN SAYS 'NO' TO TURK'S DEMAND

England Tells Ottomans That It Will Not Abandon Mosul Vilayet

By Associated Press
London—A Reuters dispatch from Lausanne says:

There is serious danger of the Near East conference becoming abortive if the Turks persist in their present methods.

LAUSANNE—Through Foreign Secretary Curzon, Great Britain informed Turkey that the British never will abandon the Mosul Vilayet, as requested by the Turkish delegation and that no prolongation of the Near East conference can influence the British government to recede from the position it has taken on this matter.

The British position is outlined in a letter sent by Lord Curzon to Ismet Pasha, head of the Turkish delegation, covering the formal reply of the British delegation to the Turkish note of Sunday last which insisted Mosul belonged to Turkey.

Lord Curzon said in this letter that the British government had expelled Turks from the Mosul area and occupied and administered it. The British had taken a pledge to free the Arabs from Turkish rule and establish the government of the Irak, and England since then had repeatedly given her word that the Arabs would not be interfered with.

Lord Curzon added that Great Britain had given her solemn pledge to let no foreign power take any part of this territory and that she would steadfastly adhere to her promise.

FAMILY SAVED FROM DEATH BY ALARM CLOCK

Gas Escaping From Coal Stove Nearly Destroys Family Of Earl Ballard

An alarm clock probably saved Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ballard and their 2-year-old daughter from asphyxiation by coal gas at their home, 1300 Lawrence street, early Tuesday morning. All three persons were unconscious when Cornelius Van Heuklon, a neighbor, forced an entrance into the Ballard home in response to a faint call for help by Mrs. Ballard.

Mr. and Mrs. Ballard and their child were sleeping in a room near a coal stove. At 6 o'clock Mr. Ballard was awakened by the alarm clock but he had scarcely stepped out of bed when he fell unconscious to the floor. Mrs. Ballard, staggered to the telephone and managed to arouse the Van Heuklon family and call for help when she also collapsed. Mr. Van Heuklon hurried to the Ballard home, opened the windows and called a physician.

All three members of the family were quickly revived and today are said to be recovering rapidly. It is probable that if help had been delayed a few minutes death would have resulted.

ANOTHER FAMILY SAVED
Oshkosh—Members of the family of Frank Neustifter are recovering today from the effects of coal gas that escaped from a stove at their home here. They were made seriously ill but all are expected to recover. Those affected were Mr. and Mrs. Neustifter, Virginia, aged 5 years, and Jean, 20 months old. Richard, a baby of 3 months, was not made ill.

WOMEN OF SWEDEN WORK FOR PURE FOOD

Stockholm—A hallmark of purity and excellence on goods for home consumption has been established by the Swedish National Housewives' association, according to Mrs. Agnes Ingelman, president of the association. Mrs. Ingelman states that the association for years has been working to secure the best merchandise for the homes, subjecting different products offered to scientific purity and quality tests. The Government Testing Bureau, as well as the Domestic Science School at Upsala, have now placed themselves at the disposal of the Association.

This guarantee mark on household provisions, groceries, and supplies will be granted only to those manufacturers whose goods pass the tests, and on condition that they place this mark on all their goods guaranteed thereunder. Periodically the goods are subjected to new tests to ascertain whether the standard is being maintained. In case the merchandise proves to have deteriorated, the manufacturer is immediately notified, and if he then fails to bring the goods up to specifications his right to use the guarantee mark of the Association is cancelled, and the fact that he has been deprived of this privilege is published.

The officials of the Swedish Association are aware of a similar activity in America under the name of the Potentia movement, and they have entered into correspondence with those back of this movement in America.

FORD DOESN'T HAVE TO PAY FOR WIFE'S DEFENSE

By Associated Press
Detroit, Mich.—J. Ford, farmer of Dearborn will not have to finance his wife's defense against his charge that she sought to have him killed. Circuit Judge Dingeman ruled Wednesday in denying a motion by counsel for Mrs. May B. Ford that the husband be required to advance $3,000 for that purpose. Mrs. Ford recently was held for trial on a charge of attempted homicide after a detective testified that, believing him to be a professional gunman, she sought to engage him to kill her husband. In denying the motion, Judge Dingeman held that Mrs. Ford could have an attorney appointed by the trial court if she is without funds.

Oneidas Claim Strip Of Land In Philadelphia

QUITTS COURT

MAHLON PITNEY

Washington—President Harding is expected to send to the senate within the next few days the nomination of a successor to Justice Pitney of the Supreme Court, who has tendered his resignation to take effect Jan. 1.

Retirement of Justice Pitney will create the fourth vacancy on the Supreme court bench which President Harding has been called upon to fill.

Two names, those of Governor Miller of New York, recently defeated for reelection and Chief Justice Robert VonMoeschler, of the Pennsylvania Supreme court, have been most prominently mentioned as possible successors to Justice Pitney.

Justice Pierce Butler, recently confirmed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Justice Day, will take the oath when the court reassembles Tuesday after a three weeks recess it is expected. During the coming week the question of liquor on ships will come up for argument. Because of the importance of this litigation and a number of other cases which are waiting argument before a full bench, the president it is said, desires to fill the Pitney vacancy at an early date.

CITY ADMITS CLAIM
It is said the city of Philadelphia admits the legality of the Indians' claim to a valuable strip of land within the city limits. An investigation will be made, however, to determine the exact extent of the claim. About $500 per acre is offered to share in the $1,000,000 award. Each person will receive approximately $250 and $300 as his share.

The Indians' claim to the New York territory which includes the cities of Rochester, Syracuse and Buffalo, is based on the treaty of 1784 which, the Whites, it is charged that none of the occupants of the land in controversy have a title to their property, and this fact, it is believed, will facilitate settlement of the claims.

Approximately 15,000 Indians are joint claimants to the New York property and if the land or its money equivalent is recovered each Indian will receive approximately $80,000.

WORK ON CLAIMS
Mrs. Kellogg has been working on the claim for many months. She is being assisted by a committee of Indians and by a former member of the New York State Indian commission.

There is every probability, Mrs. Kellogg intimated, that the Philadelphia claim will be settled quickly but it is probable the claim to New York lands will be a long drawn out affair.

The cat, with all its lives intact, established a new record for feline speed when it was released from the sack.

If I Could Paint Lamp Shades

BY GOGGETTER

Nothing adds more to the cozy appearance of a room than a cheerful lamp and lamp shade. This is particularly true of the painted lamp shade of yellow or parchment. Many people have built up a well-paying business by painting these shades and selling them in their own homes. The work is really quite simple for the person who has even a touch of talent. If I were capable of making some of the gorgeously colored shades I see every day in my friends' homes I would start right in at this work. Can you imagine any more pleasant occupation for spare moments? Get this people to buy my shades would be easy provided I advertised my handiwork in the Want Ads columns of The Post-Crescent. APPLETON HELPS TO MAKE WORKERS OUT OF BEGGARS

W. F. Faulkes, Formerly of Appleton, Heads This Work For State

Appleton has a part in a new movement to do away with beggars by teaching them occupations possible with their respective handicaps. A former Appleton man, W. F. Faulkes, at one time director of the vocational school, also figures prominently in this unique service.

This means of removing pauperism is made possible under Wisconsin's industrial rehabilitation act. Mr. Faulkes is state supervisor of activities under its provisions.

Efficient administration of this law is an answer to the question why there are so few beggars in this state. Wisconsin almost may boast that the street corners in the cities are not encumbered by the crippled and blind who infected other states by thousands.

HAVE BIG FUND
Under the federal act known as the industrial rehabilitation law which appropriates $25,000 to the state, and the state rehabilitation act which provides $28,000, those who have been crippled or injured in any way which would make them unfit for work are trained for positions at which they can make a good living.

"The public should cooperate in reporting all beggars to the local committee in charge of this form of welfare work," said Mr. Faulkes, in a statement.

These committees are composed of members of various organizations such as the Kiwanis club, the Rotary club, the Lions club and other civic and welfare organizations in the community where the work is being carried on.

WORK COMMITTEE PLAN
Committees of this sort have been established in Appleton, Ladysburg, Waupun, Janesville, Racine, Monitowoc, Eau Claire, Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Marinette and Antigo. They are to be established soon in a number of other cities of the state.

"The work which is being done by these committees and by Mr. Faulkes and his associates is truly miraculous," G. D. Hambrecht, state director of vocational education, declared in explaining the work.

"Mr. Faulkes and his assistants are doing the same thing for the injured men that the doctor does for his patients on the sick bed," Mr. Hambrecht said.

"Rehabilitation is a personal service and requires excellent personal supervision at all stages of the training. Self-rehabilitation is the accomplishment of the few rather than of the many."

"The records of the industrial commission are replete with examples of unsuccessful effort at self-rehabilitation."

DIPHTHERIA CASE FIRST IN 10 DAYS

Disappearance Of Epidemic Only Matter Of Few Days, Felton Believes

The first diphtheria case in ten days was brought to the attention of the health department Tuesday. The fact that no cases had arisen since Jan. 15 caused Dr. W. C. Felton, health commissioner, to be considerably optimistic. With favorable weather conditions, he believes that the epidemic soon will be eliminated. Twelve cases were released within the last two days, leaving hardly a dozen homes still under quarantine. Some of the homes have the ill for time of being quarantined unusually long on account of failure to show negative cultures.

"Bud" Olson is at his home at Neenah suffering with a severe scalp wound as a result of being struck over the head with a meat cleaver in the hands of Gus Dolens, Menasha, near Rose Gardens, between Neenah and Oshkosh, Saturday night. According to information from Neenah, Dolens was repairing his automobile when Olson drove up. Olson is said to have struck Dolens with his fist and the latter went into the Rose Gardens roadhouse and came out with a cleaver with which he hit Olson and then drove off, leaving Olson in the road where he was found some time later by Edward Wenzel who took him to Neenah.

SAT ON HIM HARD
I was returning from a last minute shopping trip on Saturday night on a crowded car. Many people were standing among them a "fleshy" lady. A man sat in the seat beside where she stood and was trying hard not to see her so that he would have to give up his seat. As the car turned a corner, the lady lost her hold on the hanging strap and sat heavily on the man. As soon as she was able to recover her balance, he got up, offered her his seat and left the car very evidently embarrassed by the turn of events. H. D. B.

BOTTENSEK GOING TO JURIST MEETING

State Association May Be Obligated To Elect Officers Before Convening

County Judge John Bottensek is planning to go to Milwaukee this week to attend the annual conference of county judges which will take place Thursday and Friday in the Republic city. On Wednesday and Thursday the circuit judges of the state also will have a conference.

The law requires that county judges meet at stated intervals in order to discuss matters pertaining to county courts. Certain bills that will be introduced in the legislature this coming session will require the attention of the judges.

Because Judge Franklin E. Rump of Marathon, vice president, has resigned to accept a position in the attorney general's office, and because Judge Fred Bexinger of Winnebago, secretary, has been made a circuit judge, the association of county judges may have to elect new officers before opening their meeting. Also because of sickness, Judge Jay E. Lyon of Walworth, president, will be unable to attend.

Justice Charles H. Crownhart of the supreme court, Herman L. Eken, attorney general-elect, and John Harrison, inheritance tax counsel, will address the conference on Thursday. Dr. Albert F. Young, superintendent of the county hospital for mental disease in Milwaukee, will speak on the commitment of the insane and the subsequent handling of cases in the hospitals for mental diseases. Friday the judges will visit the industrial home for girls and the hospital for mental diseases.

CITY'S CAMPSITE PRAISED WARMLY

Appleton's tourist camp at Alicia park is praised warmly in letters that are reaching the chamber of commerce in response to the Christmas greetings sent to all who stayed in this city overnight during the touring season.

One describes the park as the best campsite he ever has seen. Another praises the city for its hospitality. One man sent the chamber a picture of his camping outfit erected for the night at Alicia park.

More than 1,000 greeting cards were sent out to persons whose names were on the tourist registry.

Promoters Of Referendum Confident 1,700 Names Will Be Obtained

More than 600 names have been affixed to the petitions in circulation here demanding a referendum to overthrow the aldermanic form of government and return to the commission plan which was in force here several years ago.

Those in charge of the petitions believe the 1,700 required names will be obtained soon so the issue may be put up to city officials and the election called.

In the meantime it has been learned that there is much sentiment

GULBRANSEN Player-Piano

A Pledge Ranking first by a wide margin in the production of player-pianos, it is fitting that Gulbransen give a pledge to our public—

A PLEDGE to foster the restless desire for improvement which has made possible the exceptional music of the Gulbransen.

A PLEDGE to adhere strictly to the Golden Rule principles that have governed all our business relations; this includes our organization, the people from whom we buy—the people to whom we sell.

A PLEDGE to continue branding the price of each Gulbransen in the back, at the factory, for the protection of our customers.

A PLEDGE never to make a Gulbransen and send it out under any other name, thus preserving Gulbransen quality for Gulbransen buyers.

A PLEDGE always to keep bright our ideal of providing exceptional music for all classes of homes, at modest prices.

A PLEDGE that the ease of playing and instant control you enjoy in the Gulbransen will ever be the standard of excellence among all player-pianos.

Those principles affect the purse and the happiness of every family buying a player-piano. The phenomenal sales Gulbransen enjoys show the public's approval of the fairness, sincerity and importance of our creed.

New Year's morning countless Gulbransens will delight families everywhere. Will your family be one of these? Play a Gulbransen at our store today—and you will understand fully these things which have brought about the broad sweep of Gulbransen popularity.

FORESEE HOLIDAY FOR P. O. FORCE ON CHRISTMAS DAY

Most Of Monday Was Spent By Carriers Handling Last-Minute Rush

Unless the American mailing public can be trained to attend to its Christmas mailing in due season, the postoffice throughout the country are on the sure road to arbitrary closing on Christmas day, regardless of the amount of Christmas mail that is undelivered, officials here believe.

Christmas was a long day for clerks, city letter carriers and rural carriers of Appleton postoffice. City carriers reported for work as early as 5 o'clock, when most of the population was still in bed dreaming of Santa's gifts on Christmas morning. Every one of the carriers devoted more than his standard eight hours' daily work to the delivery of last-minute parcels. The first carriers finished their work by 3 o'clock in the afternoon, but most of them did not return to the office until 4:30 or 5 o'clock, thereby putting in 12 hours' work.

Rural carriers started on their routes considerably earlier than usual in order to finish their deliveries so as to have a part of the day with their families. But they had to rouse a good many people out of bed to sign receipts for parcels.

The volume of Christmas mail was fully as heavy as in previous years. Some of the carriers report that rural patrons are becoming more accommodating in the way of stamping their own mail and waiting at the box for the carrier.

Orders had been issued from the department in Washington to arrange for extra help and a special schedule where possible, that would allow some employees to spend at least a part of Christmas at home. Under existing conditions, it was impossible of execution, Postmaster Zuehlke said.

FURS AND MYSTERY

By A. CARSTENSEN
Nutria is a trade name for the fur of the Coypu, one of the few fur-bearing animals of South America. It is a fur which closely resembles beaver. When unaltered and dyed enough of it has been sold as beaver or seal (which it can also be made to imitate) to mean fortunes to the unscrupulous dealers who put over the deception.

Of late, however, nutria has come into its own very largely, and this opens up a new field for the ill-gotten profit seekers—that of creating substitutes for it.

You can readily see, therefore, that it is a difficult thing to get, in an unreliable store, good nutria fur under its own name. The good and medium grades are masquerading as beaver and seal while the poor skins and the substitutes take their place.

Unlike all northern skins, nutria is cured by drying in the open air, in the direct rays of the sun, which undoubtedly has much to do with its great durability. For years it has ranked next to beaver in the manufacture of superfine, durable and costly felt hats for men.

All of this shows us that, first—nutria is a good fur. Second—like all other furs, it is of many grades. Third—it is used largely to imitate more costly furs. Fourth—it is widely imitated. And Fifth—that the dealer of integrity is the man to patronize every time.

BOOK ON CARUSO'S ART MOST POPULAR

Inside Story Of Singer's Methods By Fucito Sought At Library

"Caruso and the Art of Singing" by Salvatore Fucito and Barnet J. Beyer has been the most widely demanded nonfiction book at the public library this last week. The book is illustrated with photographs of Caruso in various roles and with caricatures drawn by Caruso himself.

According to Fucito two considerations prompted the writing of this book on Enrico Caruso's art. First, the desire to pay tribute to the memory of a friend and a great artist; second, the hope of passing on to all concerned with the art of singing Caruso's methods in breathing and producing tones, his vocal exercises and his views on vocal technique, his ideals of singing as well as his practical advice to singers. He has dealt with his life only in so far as it is closely related to his art.

Salvatore Fucito says: "During the years I spent with Caruso he often talked to me about his life, his struggles and triumphs as well as his art. He always spoke modestly of his phenomenal achievement, but he loved his art and often discussed its vexing problems. He had much more than a magical voice; he was consciously an artist, one whose extraordinary vocal and dramatic powers were in great measure the fruits of a thorough comprehension of his art. He devised exercises that revealed a remarkable insight into what is required to make the singing voice agile and flexible. The vowels he employed to blend and color his tones demonstrated that even his tone mystery was conditioned by his directing intelligence."

The other nonfiction book popular with Appleton people has been "Public Opinion" by Lippmann. This book which has not been reported among the popular books before contains food for thought.

"One of Ours" by Cather. "The Dust Flower" by King and "Forsyte Saga" have been the fiction books in greatest demand this last week. The first two books have been featured and have been very popular but the last one, which is in demand for the first time, has been the least popular.

"Office Closed" The office of the Aid association for Lutherans was deserted Tuesday, the employees and officers celebrating the second and final day of their Christmas festivities. This 2-day custom has prevailed ever since the association was organized 20 years ago.

PLANTZ TO SPEAK AT MASSMEETING FOR PEACE, SUNDAY

Every Church In Appleton Asked To Share In Gathering At Chapel

Dr. Samuel Plantz, president of Lawrence college, will be the speaker at the massmeeting for peace to be held in Lawrence Memorial chapel at 7:30 Sunday evening, according to a decision of Appleton Ministerial association at its regular meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday morning.

Committees also are working on an elaborate musical program and will select a strong leader for community singing.

This New Years eve gathering is part of a nationwide demonstration for peace, capitalizing the holiday spirit in centering thought of world leaders on the necessity for effective measures to remove the possibility of future wars.

Every church in Appleton, no matter what its faith or denomination, will be invited by the association to assist in staging the massmeeting. The people of Appleton will be invited.

The churches promoting the event are the Congregational, First Methodist, German Methodist, Presbyterian, Emanuel Evangelical, Trinity English Lutheran, All Saints Episcopal and First Reformed. There is to be no forum meeting and the chapel therefore was made available for the peace meeting.

"Y" CHECKER TEAM IS PLAYING GAME BY MAIL

A game of checkers by mail is being played by Harry Parton, Harry Lieth and Thomas VanAlstyne of Appleton, Y. M. C. A. and Leon R. Liljeqvist and Herman Fleith of Wausau, Y. M. C. A. One move is made by one city's team, and the record is sent on a postcard. The next day the other side moves and reports. Each team has made two moves according to the chart exhibited in the boys' division of the local Y. M. C. A. The game revived interest in checkers in both cities.

Jail Empty The county jail housed no guests over the weekend to darken their Christmas, and thus Sheriff F. G. Schwartz lost the opportunity of playing host to prisoners. The day was a peaceful one for county and local officers of the peace.

Gerald Carroll of Kansas City, Mo., and Emory Carroll of Chicago, spent Christmas at the home of their father, Dennis Carroll South River-st.

Flood Of Cards Takes Care Of Forgotten Ones

Judging from the large volume of last-minute Christmas cards delivered on Christmas day, there must have been a great many people in other cities who had not expected cards from Appleton, but on receiving them, were forced to return the greetings. It is also possible that a few Appleton residents made another trip to downtown stores in search of more cards to send to those who had unexpectedly remembered them.

It can be surmised that a few of the cards read somewhat like this: "Dear friend: Received your present on Christmas day. It is just beautiful. I also sent you a little gift last week. I hope it did not get lost in the mails. Please let me know if you do not receive it." And that means another unexpected present to buy."

THE WEEK AFTER CHRISTMAS

The week between Christmas and New Year's, commonly called the holiday season, is a mighty important although sometimes a vicious time in the great American home. Father goes about his business taking an inventory of himself and what is his, while mother attempts to advertise the delightful invasion of the Christmas spirit within her home amid the exhilarated shouts and laughter of the children who are still enchanted by the newness of their Christmas toys and joys. The grown up daughter thinks in terms of party dresses and dancing slippers while the oldest son wears his best with no thought of returning to the old discarded neckties and socks.

The week between Christmas and the first day of the new year is an opportune time for meditation. The spirit of Christmas is a grand and glorious inspiration, and while this inspiration is fresh in the memory, the subsequent elapse of time that follows the 25th of December spells opportunity for a worthwhile introspection. Father is usually the first to see this and boastfully unfolds his resolve to diminish his accumulated habits, at least to cut out one or two of his own excessive indulgences. The more matured and serious minded members of the family follow the wise example and superficialities and "good times" are had by all, spurred by the thought of the oncoming funeral dirge for shallow pleasures and excesses. New Year's day witnesses a changed atmosphere in the great American home, a very normal atmosphere. What really takes place is a realization on the part of all that thrift, clean living, thoughtfulness of others, hearty cooperation, and self-denial are all attributes of happiness. One last bit of gaiety is sufficient proof that it isn't the thing for a steady diet.

THE PENALTY OF FALSE HOPES

Experiences in the life of others are a valuable guide to our own conduct. In one of the larger cities an estimable couple filed voluntary petitions in bankruptcy. The husband stated liabilities in excess of $31,000 and the wife an equal amount, their total declared obligation more than $62,000. The husband listed his assets at more than $10,000, which, with the exception of $275, was pledged as security on a debt, and the wife claimed exemption on about $175 of property. The couple had made loans at different times in the course of two years. They had magnificent expectations in the subsequent inheritance of a large fortune from the wife's father. The legacy turned out to be a mere trifle.

Here was a respectable couple who borrowed a considerable amount of money on mere expectations. They looked forward to being rich some day. They believed that an ample competence was sure to come to them. The expectations proved to be practically nothing. If there had been vast wealth in custody of either of them, it had disappeared. From the estate they finally received a few hundred dollars. As we read this simple story, we smile at the indiscretion of this man and wife, yet at the same time, we pity them. It is sad that they have large debts instead of a big fortune. But why did they live on the future? Why did they borrow money on something which they were not sure that they would receive? Why did they not wait until they had the fortune in their possession?

It is likely that most men and women are taking just as reckless means of living in ease, or in a select social environment. They go into debt for luxuries, and pledge their incomes for months or years ahead. Their assets are not certain, but prospects are yet unmaturing.

They are living in more or less show, but are tangled with financial obligations. The future is dubious, and fortune is capricious. Debts without actual security with which to liquidate them are burdens and handicaps. Most of us have magnificent expectations. We may realize them, or we may not. But we cannot depend on them. What we achieve, what we gain is generally different than what we expect to gain. The only expectations which are properly negotiable are those which have become real.

THE LEAGUE AS A SCHOOL

Miss Mary McDowell, well known in social welfare circles, calls the League of Nations assembly a "school of new diplomacy." She has been attending the assembly for a month, sitting in committee meetings and talking with representatives from many lands.

The diplomacy she has observed there is new in several respects. In the first place the weak and small nations sit side by side with the powerful and large nations, and the former speak out their minds on any problem which comes up just as freely as do the others. Big and little alike have free access to all the information gathered by the secretariat and the commissions.

Furthermore, the diplomacy she observed there achieved certain constructive things and made progress toward just settlements in many matters because an interested public was allowed to witness discussions and because the press of the world was on hand.

The biggest problems left by the World war in Europe have not been turned over to the League yet, for various reasons. Until the League does handle those matters it will not be a complete success. But most visitors consider the outlook cheerful and hopeful, because the League members are laying a strong foundation of mutual understanding, useful accomplishment and friendly cooperation in many of the lesser matters of international relations. They may not be averting all military crises, but they are averting a lot of secondary complications and tribulations in ways that will have far-reaching beneficial results. In contrast with old diplomacy and secret treaty-making the League is a marvelous institution.

WHY THE HURRY?

Most of us had forgotten the Isle of Pines belonged to the United States or Cuba, or whether it was an autonomy. Most of us did not have any interest in the matter, and evidently the residents of that island off the Cuban mainland didn't bother about their political status.

It is now brought to our attention that a treaty relinquishing to Cuba any right or title the United States may have had to the Isle of Pines has been resting in the American senate for eighteen years. Secretary Hughes has suggested that the treaty be ratified. Possibly, but what is the hurry?

THEY NEED A NEWSPAPER

The professor of political science at Syracuse university gave his students a test on current events the other day with results that may be considered either humorous or pathetic according to the point of view. Questions were asked concerning twenty prominent men and a dozen timely subjects, such as the professor had the courage to give them to the world.

This showing will, of course, give great aid and comfort to that enemy of higher education, Thomas A. Edison. He will accept it as bearing out his contention that college students are weak in every-day useful knowledge. That would indeed seem to be indicated by this test, but it does not confirm his other contention that college training unfits young men for practical life. A half hour's or hour's reading of a good newspaper daily would fully supply the deficiencies so plainly shown. This reading should be supplemented by a brief talk by the instructor explaining the significance of the chief happenings in the news of the day. After a couple of weeks of such a course let the professor institute another test and he will be surprised at the different results, provided he has done his work well. Most of our universities and colleges now have courses in "journalism," instruction in making of newspapers. They might well have courses in journalism in another sense, the intelligent reading of newspapers. Only thus can they keep their instruction in such subjects as political science, history and economics fresh, vivid and up-to-date.—PITTSBURGH CHRONICLE TELEGRAPH.

IS THE AIR FREE?

Everyone who owns a radio set will be interested in the outcome of the suit recently filed in the Jay Johnston Co., Illinois, Circuit court by Edward McWilliams against Wiley Bergman, Mr. McWilliams alleges that Mr. Bergman, who owns a powerful amateur set, sends messages when the broadcasting stations are sending out market reports, news, music "and other messages to interest and entertain the public." It is Mr. McWilliams' contention that the Bergman messages make it impossible to hear the entertainment programs from the broadcasting stations.

Is the air still as free as the old saw asserts, or are there traffic rules to be obeyed by all radio operators?

The outcome of this Illinois case may set an important radio precedent.—WORCESTER GAZETTE.

STUTS FOR STUTTERS

Stuttering can be overcome by training in posture, proper breathing, articulation, phonation and fluency in thinking. But first, all one who stutters should undergo a thorough physical examination by the physician and have any defects, especially defects of nose and throat, treated. Then he should enter upon a prolonged course of general physical training under a competent director, as in a Y. M. C. A. gymnasium class.

Learn to think before you speak. That is, try to say to yourself first what you are about to say aloud.

Always open your mouth and take a quick inspiration through the mouth just before you speak. Practice this when you are alone, reading or speaking. At the same time—a regular period of exercise night and morning is advisable—learn to lay in enough air while you are taking that preliminary quick inspiration through the open mouth to last you through a phrase or sentence. Many stutters err in beginning speech when the chest is empty or nearly empty, about the end of expiration. Then they go broke for wind before they reach the end of the phrase or sentence, and the vocal engine commences missing. It is for this reason that training in singing under a strict, stern teacher, is beneficial for a stutterer.

In all practice, lengthen and strengthen the vowels. Avoid the sing song or monotone in speaking. Practice reading rhymed verses or poetry aloud, to yourself or, better, to a sympathetic listener, striving to acquire such inflection of voice that a listener in the next room may be unable to guess whether you are reading or conversing.

Strive to keep your voice low, that is, soft, not harsh, musical, not loud. Never speak more loudly than is necessary to make yourself heard.

Practice counting as far as you can on one breath, musically, distinctly, enunciating each number clearly.

Practice saying the alphabet as far as possible on one breath, with the voice always carefully modulated. Always stop and lay in some more wind before you run down completely.

Practice singing scales and later old familiar songs or hymns while you are dressing and undressing night and morning.

Let some one go over various pages of a book crossing out a word here and there. Then practice reading those pages aloud and supplying words off hand to fill the gaps.

Be especially careful to avoid sing song or monotone in reading aloud and in ordinary conversation. A stutterer may be able to sing what he wishes to say when he can't say it. Let the conversational voice compass many musical notes.

A Young Man Of Twenty

Please suggest exercises for a young man 20 years old who works in an office.—S. P. H.

One of the best exercises a young man can take every day to neutralize the evil effects of office work is two miles of oxygen on the hoof three times daily or six miles in one dose if he prefers. That takes 100 minutes and is well worth the price. If the young man is very poor—for walking is a luxury which only well to do or successful men can now afford—about 15 minutes a day, on using in the morning or at bedtime, devoted to the Brady symphony will help to keep him from growing flabby and unfit. Complete words and music of the piece sent to any correct address on receipt of request accompanied with price—a stamped self directed envelope. By request, I do not mean a clipping.

Antitoxin Not a Renovator
Does antitoxin given in a diphtheria case act as a renovator, killing all other germs that might be present in the system? Please tell me how high an adult's temperature may go and the patient still live.—Mrs. W. H. J.

Answer—No, antitoxin doesn't kill any germs. The body temperature may go as high as 112 degrees F., and the patient still survive to complain about the poor heat in the apartment.

Two years ago I followed the Karell regimen as suggested by you and reduced from 175 to 135 pounds (I am 63 inches tall). I generally lost two pounds a week taking the Karell regimen three alternate days each week. Then I went into store work and began to put on flesh again. Now I am back about where I was two years ago. What do you think of rubber garments for reducing? Would they be injurious?—Mrs. H. S.

Answer—The rubber garments would not be injurious if they do not set up skin inflammation or eczema. But it is absurd to imagine they will reduce to any appreciable degree. It must be that you feel toward poor Karell as Tom Brown felt toward Doctor Fell.

A Resume of American Newspaper Opinion.

LESSON TO POLISH NATIONALISTS IN ASSASSINATION

Accepting the statement that the assassination of the Polish president was the work of a maniac and not the outcome of a political plot, it still cannot be held to be without political significance, as most American editors analyze the tragedy. Following as it did immediately an inauguration attended by riotous outbreaks of nationalist sentiment, it may well be, as the NEW YORK TIMES expresses the prevailing belief, "that violent party passions, beating upon a mind unbalanced, swept it into the crime."

In any event, the murder focuses attention on the cross-currents and antagonisms in Polish politics which must be mitigated before the Polish republic can be assured any measure of stability or success.

The BOSTON TRANSCRIPT finds "little reason to blame the Polish Nationalists, either directly or indirectly, for the assassination of President Narutowicz," for "it was clearly not a political assassination. In the sense in which the murder took long ago in Germany of Walter Rathenau, it was assuredly was." His election "caused discontent among the Nationalists," admittedly, but, the NEW YORK TRIBUNE points out, they had "nothing to gain by assassinating him, since the Assembly which elected him would also elect his successor."

Rather, the paper classes the killing of Narutowicz "with Czolgosz's murder of President McKinley."

But in view of developments in Poland since the creation of the republic, the assassination of her first president "cannot be easily dismissed as the act of an irresponsible fanatic," as the BOSTON GLOBE sees it.

And many editors believe that the feverish partisan riots that accompanied the inauguration instilled the desire to kill in the diseased mind of the slayer. In commenting on the inaugural riots the DETROIT FREE PRESS expressed the opinion that Poland "was making a rather bad start in democracy," and later it adds the fear that it is now "making an excellent start toward anarchy." Certainly the assassination "casts doubt upon the future" of the new republic, the NEW ORLEANS TIMES-PICAYUNE agrees, for while "freedom may not have shrieked when Narutowicz fell," the NEW YORK HERALD holds that his assassination "is a disturbing reminder of the fact that liberty and independence form a heady brew," and the HERALD regards the task of Irish Free State leaders "simple when compared with that which confronts Polish patriots."

"Young nations cannot be brought into existence without some travail," observes the ASHEVILLE (N. C.) TIMES, and "disembodied Poland is no exception to this rule." The present crisis merely "shows that Poland has a long way to go before she can find her political self and establish a durable government that will command the support of the people."

It is brought out in a number of papers that the American Republic has suffered the stigma of presidential assassination three times in its history, but, as the PITTSBURGH PRESS points out, "we had existed a number of generations, however, and our stability as an independent, self-governing nation was established beyond doubt, when this kind of episode began to appear in our political history," and "whether Poland, whose stormy affairs are much more difficult to administer than ours, is prepared to withstand so unfortunate a complication at the very threshold of its career as a self-governing republic, is not certain."

Certainly the crime "indicates the extremely critical condition of Polish politics," and, in the opinion of the CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER, will not help the cause of the Nationalists. "There is no doubt," the PLAIN DEALER concludes, "that Narutowicz was not the choice of majority of the voters of strictly Polish blood; nevertheless he was elected 'in a perfectly constitutional manner,' since 'the Polish constitution gives full citizenship rights to the Jews, Ukrainians, Russians and Lithuanians within the Polish state, and if these elements were able to combine with a sufficient number of Polish radicals their choice was deserving of acceptance by out-and-out Poles whose candidate was squarely defeated."

But the Nationalists proved "not good judges." The PITTSBURGH GAZETTE TIMES says, and "they exhibited displeasure in so many ways that it is not astonishing if a man of unbalanced mind became obsessed with the idea that he would perform a patriotic service by slaying the object of the uproar." Thus "race hatred, intolerance, territorial greed and self-appointed superiority have reaped the results they generally reap, in any country," the BOSTON GLOBE believes, "wherever they are made the slogan of political action."

The assassin should, however, serve to warn "Polish patriots to abate the violence of an ultra-nationalistic spirit which challenges the legal election of the Chief of State because of his support by elements non-Polish by race, but incorporated in the Polish republic, who owe Poland service in peace and war and to whom Poland owes equality of treatment with the rest of the population." This, the PHILADELPHIA BULLETIN holds, is the lesson which "Poland must draw from the tragedy. It is that she must not allow herself to be a practical lesson in the dangers of expanding her frontiers into regions that may be 'historically Polish' but are actually anti-Polish" and "the incident should be warning to her to make peace within her own borders and to covet no more territory anywhere."

"All parties have been temporarily united in mourning for the lost leader," the PHILADELPHIA EVENING PUBLIC LEADER reports, and "there is an unmistakable consciousness throughout Poland that its reputation as a law-abiding nation is at stake." So if the new republic "is at stake" in the new republic "is at stake," the NEW YORK TIMES says, "that shocked into seeing the truth," the paper shares "an opportunity perhaps for sacrificial national redemption." Poland "must learn first of all to control its prejudices and passions if it is to hope to endure," the KNICKERBOCKER PRESS (Albany) advises, for, as the NEW YORK JOURNAL puts it, "it takes more than words to establish a real republic. You must have the material of which republics are made." Admittedly "the Poles have not had training in democracy," but if riotous demonstrations against duly elected representatives are possible, whatever the outcome, the outlook, as American writers view it, is not promising.

Big Invention Is Never New

(From Discovery, London.)

Dozens of great inventions of civilization were nearly perfected years before they came to fruition. They needed some little thing—some simple idea, device, or method—but they needed it so badly that they wouldn't work without it and their day came when some fortunate inventor supplied it. This finder of the final key usually ranks as the inventor. All he did was to fit into place the piece in the puzzle but he deserves the title and the honors for his part of the work is what put the machine into useful motion.

Herbert W. Hodwill reminds us that the most sensational of recent triumphs of invention—the conquest of the air—was long overdue. He writes: "Again and again a promising advance has been brought to a halt by an obstacle that seems almost trivial. It may be that generations or even centuries pass before there flashes into someone's mind the illuminating idea that enables this hindrance to be surmounted."

"This arrest of invention has been abundantly illustrated in the transit by land as well as by air. In view of the part that steam played in modern methods of transport, as well as in industry generally, one is amazed to learn that its use was anticipated early in the Christian era. In a treatise written about A. D. 180, Hero of Alexandria describes a hollow spherical vessel turning on an axis, which vessel was supplied with steam and driven by the reaction from escaping jets."

"Yet the belief that there could be any mechanical value in the expansive power of steam seems to have slumbered through the ages not to awaken until the seventeenth century, when there began a series of experiments culminating in Watt's famous invention of 1769. A crude anticipation of the modern railway existed near Newcastle-Tyne as long ago as 1676, when coals were conveyed from the mines to the river along parallel rails of timber."

"The story of the various contrivances that prepared the way for George Stephenson's railway engine is familiar to all students of industrial history. The motor car of our own time certainly appears to be one of those inventions that should have come earlier, when one remembers the road locomotives of Oliver Evans in America and of Trevithick in Wales more than a century ago. Perhaps even the development of steam navigation might have been expected sooner, inasmuch as the ship's paddle is only an appliance of the familiar water wheel and the screw propeller an extension on the vanes of the windmill."

Still more remarkable, Mr. Hodwill writes, are the instances of long delay in the discovery of improvements in the arts that have to do with reading and writing. Centuries of literary activity passed before anything corresponding to our "running hand" was thought of. He wonders also that the Greek or Roman writers of the fourth century should have seen what an advantage it would have been to separate words by spaces, as had been done on inscriptions in earlier times. He goes on:

"Though the European world had to wait until the fifteenth century for the invention of printing as we know it, many of the most important elements of this art were familiar long before. In the time of Virgil, brands with letters were used for marking the owner's name on cattle and articles of merchandise were stamped by a similar process."

Built Fortune On Shoestring

During the financial debacle Cuba indulged in some time ago discretion in the matter of loan grants was sadly lacking.

One Spanish youth revealed in the loan liabilities of the Cuban banks. This youth acquired, through a shoestring investment, a sugar plantation worth in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

With the boom then under way, he immediately set about to outlive Ponzi of Boston fame. He went to one bank, an institution now in liquidation, and obtained a first mortgage on the property for $7,000,000. The capitalization of the bank making the loan was but $5,000,000.

The youth was not content. He went to another bank and negotiated a second mortgage of $4,000,000. To another he went and obtained a third mortgage of $3,000,000. All in all, he acquired five mortgages upon his plantation, and in addition, other loans, until his indebtedness ran close to $35,000,000.

The youth was looked upon as one of the millionaires. When the crash came he slipped to Spain. There he now resides, living peacefully upon the remnants of a merry Cuban existence.

The bank liquidating commission, now has this sugar plantation under its care. It is for sale. It can be bought for about $2,000,000 and on very easy terms.

Q. Who was the model for the Gibson Girl? K. L. C.

A. Charles Dana Gibson says that in spite of his efforts to make a variety of types by drawing from many different models, there was in his case as in so many others, a tendency to a type. This type was labeled not by him but by others, the Gibson Girl. It would not be fair to say that only one model was responsible.

Q. Does matter mailed to the Copyright Office have to have stamps on it? R. S. T.

A. Matter for copyright deposited with a postmaster for transmission to the register of copyrights, Washington, D. C., will be accepted for mailing free of postage and when requested a receipt therefor will be given on a form furnished by the sender. Such matter, however, may not be sent without prepayment of the registry fee.

Q. Who invented the radiophone? T. A. W.

A. The National Radio Institute says that Dr. Leo De Forrest in 1912 invented the vacuum tube and various other scientists have used this invention as a foundation and have made improvements so that no one person is credited with the invention of the radiophone.

Q. How large must a town be in order to have a mail carrier? A. V.

A. The Post Office Department says that it is necessary to have a village have a population of 1,500 people before it is entitled to a village mail carrier.

Q. How is gravity on other planets measured? G. W.

A. The Naval Observatory says that surface gravity on another planet, as compared with the earth, is found by dividing the planet's mass—relative to that of the earth—by the square of its diameter—also relative to that of the earth. A body weighing 100 pounds on the earth would weigh 32 pounds on Mars and only 38 on Venus.

Q. Where does the mansard roof get its name? J. L. L.

A. The mansard roof is so called from Francois Mansard or Mansart, the French architect to whom its invention is attributed.

Q. Was the actor, Richard Mansfield, a native of the United States? C. M. E.

A. Richard Mansfield was born in "Islington and entered the theatrical profession in England.

Q. What birds have the greatest wing power? R. E.

A. This question has not been definitely determined, but in proportion to their size, their bodies being extremely small, the wings of many war hawks, or frigate birds, are longer than in other birds and have an extent of seven feet or more.

Q. Is there in Switzerland an implement which was actually made from weapons of war according to Scripture? A. G. N.

A. In the year 1876 the Universal Peace Union celebrated its tenth anniversary in Philadelphia, and the officers present offered their swords to be converted into agricultural implements and a prize of $10 was offered for the first which would be cast from these weapons. This was a card and was displayed at the Paris Exposition, 1878, and then given to the city and people of Geneva as a token of universal accord and peace.

Q. What is the word that the Boy Scouts of England have coined? O. L. A. Probably you refer to the word "dod" which they have formed from the initials of the phrase "do our best."

Q. Please give information regarding the school of diplomacy maintained by the Government. W. F. M.

A. The Government does not maintain a school for the training of candidates for the foreign service, does not recommend any particular institution, does not furnish a course of study in any school, nor suggest a list of books to be studied.

London Glories In Its Big Fog

(Dale Collins, in The London Daily Mail, Continental Edition.)
They took a fiendish pride in it, these Londoners!

That was the incredible and appalling truth. Some hateful monster had breathed upon London and the sooty blanket of the fog had descended upon us. It had stolen away the sky and the sun, stolen the colors of the world, and toned everything to drab gray. We lived in a box of unclean cotton-wool which numbed and stifled. The air seemed so heavy laden that it could not carry sound.

Down in the tube there was some escape, but as we rattled along the fog remained the topic of conversation. It was then I trapped these shameless ones joying in the dreadful thing.

Nominally, everyone was a grumbler and a critic, but there was a note of pride running through it all which was sinful.

"This is nothing," said one. "I remember a Sunday last year when you walked into the street lamp posts because you couldn't see their lights!"

He pretended that he was merely citing a more horrible example, but it was obvious that he cherished the memory of this fog of his, that he had a proprietorial fondness of it, that he liked to regard his fog as the worst of all.

But his companion would not let the claim pass unchallenged.

"That worst fog I ever remember was about 10 years ago," he declared. "It was so thick that I struck a match and didn't know it was alight until I burnt my fingers!"

Doubtless it is something to possess anything which is absolutely the worst. One holds a record. To gain it you may

PLAN FOR JOINT MEETING OF GAME CLUBS ON JAN. 15

Executive Committee Will Meet Friday—New Laws Soon To Be Drafted

The final meeting of the executive committee of Outagamie County Fish and Game Protective association and the Isaac Walton league will be held next Friday evening in Actual Business college. Final preparations will be made for the joint meeting of the two organizations on the night of Jan. 15 in Elk club. The following day the state convention will be held in Madison. Dr. J. A. Holmes and W. R. Wheaton will represent the local clubs.

The state meeting will be devoted largely to discussion of new legislation which is expected to assist in conservation of Wisconsin game and fish. The state conservation commission has outlined a number of legislative bills which will be discussed. Several of these bills were formulated last summer following a meeting of the commission with representative sportsmen from all over the state. At that time there was sentiment in favor of requiring a license for hook and line fishermen but it is now reported that there is little hope for passage of a bill of that kind. An effort will be made, however, to pass a bill raising the fee for hunting licenses to $1.50.

Many minor matters affecting hunting and fishing in the state also will be considered. One of these is a bill to establish a minimum length of seven inches for perch and all other pan fish in Wisconsin. A resolution adopted at the summer meeting asking an appropriation of $10,000 for finding a means of preventing the dumping of industrial waste into fishing streams probably will be incorporated into a bill for the legislature.

Buffalo Meat Treat Offered Appleton Flocks

Want to see a buffalo? Its not a circus about to arrive for its not a live buffalo, but its a perfectly good one weighing 900 pounds and reposes gracefully in the meat market of Voets Bros. It is one of a lot of ten shipped into Wisconsin from the buffalo ranch of Scotty Phillip, Fort Pierre, S. D.

The animal arrived the first of the week and the owners of the market decided to put it on exhibition for about a week before they cut it up for sale. The meat of the buffalo is said to be especially tender and juicy and is sold in practically the same cuts as beef.

Orders may be placed now, but will not be delivered until after the buffalo is quartered.

3 KAUKAUNA MEN JAILED FOR MONTH

Disturbances Over Holiday Period Stimulate Activity Of Court

'Twas the day before the night before Christmas, and all was still in Kaukauna except for the row that was raised by Carl Giersbach when he assaulted a woman and gave her a black eye. Complaint was made to Chief R. H. McCarty of Kaukauna police department. Giersbach was brought in to Judge A. M. Spencer's court Tuesday for the offense and there received a sentence of 30 days in the workhouse.

The same day, Saturday, John Blaha, Jr., was arrested in Kaukauna for driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Brought into the court by Chief McCarty, he was also found guilty and sentenced to 30 days in the same place.

UNITED CONSUMERS GO IN BANKRUPTCY

Appleton Gas Filling Station Will Not Be Affected By Court Order

No word had been received up to noon Wednesday by Charles Fose, manager of the Appleton filling station of the United Consumers Corporation concerning the appointment of a receiver by the circuit court of Milwaukee.

The station is operating as usual and Mr. Fose believes action of the parent company will not mean the closing of the Appleton office or any changes in its service.

A Milwaukee Associated Press dispatch concerning the receivership declares that Herbert L. Peterson, Sturgeon Bay banker and president of the United Consumers Corp. who was appointed receiver for the corporation Tuesday was ousted Wednesday by Judge L. W. Halsey in circuit court at Milwaukee. Peterson was ousted after many stockholders and creditors of the corporation entered objections to him as receiver on the grounds that he was president of the corporation. Julius J. Goetz of Milwaukee was appointed receiver to replace Peterson.

Attorney Francis Bloodgood representing creditors said that corporation owed $300,000 in unsecured debts. Attorney Henry Sloan listed the liabilities at $137,000 and said that there was $500,000 worth of stock outstanding. There are about 4,000 Wisconsin stockholders.

Triumphs of M. Jonquelle

These squares had been laid down on wooden gills, nailed together, and floored over underneath. Each square had, therefore, a sort of wooden pocket beneath it. This wooden pocket under the white square that Monsieur Jonquelle removed, was filled with gold-pieces.

The Oriental, bending over, made a profound exclamation of surprise. He remained immovable in an overwhelming wonder. That the man was amazed at something of which he was up to the moment, he had not had the slightest conception, was clearly evident.

Monsieur Jonquelle permitted the marble square to go back into its place, and he returned to his chair. The Oriental sat down beyond him, speechless in his amazement. The Prefect of Police continued to speak as though the man's concern were not a thing which he had observed.

"And so you see, monsieur, we have here the motive, the opportunity, and the execution of these false evidences, to indicate that you were the assassin of Dernburg Pasha. And again I beg you to observe how fatal it is to proceed with indicative evidences when one wishes to establish a theory. It is fortunate, monsieur, that it is I who considered these evidences against you, for it is I who know that Dernburg Pasha was dead when you arrived in this house."

He paused.

"And from the wound in his throat, I knew at once what hand it was that inflicted it—a hand not now living."

"The hand of the dead man?" echoed the Oriental. "You mean the hand of a dead man?"

"I mean the hand of the dead Dernburg Pasha," replied the Prefect.

"The wound began heavily on the left side and trailed off to the right. That is the slash of a suicide. Death-wounds, inflicted by one intent on taking his own life, are always inflicted on the left side, because they are undertaken with the right hand, and if they are done with a knife, they begin with a heavy incision that falls out as the knife is drawn to the right—the strength of the person undertaking to inflict the wound falls. Suicidal wounds, when inflicted with a sharp instrument, have always these evidential signs. They cannot be mistaken."

Monsieur Jonquelle arose.

"Let me clear this mystery," he said. "Dernburg Pasha was one of the most accomplished counterfeiters in the world."

He opened his hand.

"This device, which looks like an alabaster box, is a mold made of plaster for the purpose of counterfeiting one of the largest gold coins of the French currency. Dernburg came here, took this house, carried forward his undertaking until he had stored the squares under this drawing room with false coins. Then when he had finished—when he had got the coins molded, gold-plated and hidden, ready for the business of their distribution, I called on him last night! It was my voice that was heard outside. I showed him that he was at the end of his tether—that the house was guarded; and I came away leaving open to him the only escape he had. He effected that escape with a razor drawn across his throat."

Monsieur Jonquelle paused, his voice firm, even and unshrinking.

"You appeared, monsieur, a little later, and seeing an opportunity to obtain an indemnity from France for a murdered subject of your country, put the razor into your pocket and clumsily dabbed the white squares of this drawing-room floor with the evidential signs of an assassination."

"I think the first clue we got was the method Chauvannes had taken to be sure that the journal would go into Paris after his death. His direction, written on the back of it, was that the bearer who brought it in should be paid five thousand francs by the executors of his estate. You see he was offering a reward for the thing to get in."

"Only one of the three men that Chauvannes constantly speaks of in his journal ever appeared. One can imagine what happened to the other two—the same thing doubtless, that happened to all of the persons who started with Chauvannes northeast to the Nyanza (after he had abandoned his excavations)."

The big man beyond Monsieur Jonquelle in the dark seemed to have composed himself to listen. He was silent, and Monsieur Jonquelle went on:

APPLETON TO HAVE CHAMPIONSHIP SKATING TOURNEY

First Annual Skate Carnival Will Be In Jones Park On Jan. 28

Elimination Tournament To Be Held On Five Public Ice Rinks
Jan. 14 and 21—Valuable
Prizes Go To Winners

Skaters! Attention!
The first annual City Championship Skating Tournament will be held at Jones Park on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 28. Prizes aggregating $75 will be awarded to winners and the winners will be known as city champions in the classes in which they compete. This tournament will be open to winners of elimination tournaments which are to be held in the five public skating rinks of Appleton on Jan. 14 and 21. These skating carnivals will be conducted by the Appleton Post-Crescent which will donate all the prizes. There will be no entry fee of any kind. Every skater in the city of Appleton is invited to enter. All entries must be in the hands of the "Skating Editor" of the Post-Crescent by noon on Wednesday, Jan. 10.

Committees consisting of Appleton men keenly interested in the great winter outdoor sport will assist the Post-Crescent in arranging the big skating tourney. City officials have given permission to use the public rinks for the tournaments and arrangements will be made for keeping the ice clear of persons not engaged in the races. Every person in Appleton and surrounding territory is invited to witness the contests.

FIRST TOURNEY HERE
This is the first attempt to conduct a skating tournament in Appleton and the Post-Crescent believes it will be successful. The prizes, which will be announced later, consist of skates and skating equipment, well worth the effort of competition.

Entries will be divided into five classes, with age and sex as the basis, in order to give every skater an equal chance at the prizes. The classes are as follows:
Senior men, for all boys and men 17 years of age and older; senior women, girls and women, 17 years and older; intermediate boys, boys from 12 to 16 years inclusive; intermediate girls, girls from 12 to 16, inclusive; midlets, boys up to and including 11 years.

12 EVENT PROGRAM
Twelve events will make up the program for the elimination tournaments on each of the five rinks on Jan. 14 and 21 and for the championship races in Jones Park Jan. 28. The five winners in each event in the ward contests will take part in the final races. In case the winner of any event in the elimination tournament is unable to compete in the finals, the second place winner will be substituted in his stead. Prizes will be given only to winners in the championship races.

Events will be as follows:
Senior, men—mile skate, 440 yard dash, mile relay.
Senior, women—220 yard dash, one-half mile relay.
Intermediate, boys—440 yard dash, 220 yard dash, 75 yards backward race.
Intermediate, girls—100 yard dash, 220 yard dash.
Midlets—10 yard dash, 220 yard dash.

In case there are so many entries in any event that confusion might result in racing the entire field at once, elimination heats will be held.

DISTRICT CITY
Districting of the city is necessary for the elimination tournament so that there will be somewhere near an equal number of skaters entered in each contest. The districting was made with a view of giving each section about an equal number of skaters. Skaters must enter in the district in which they live in order to qualify. The districts are as follows:

First ward rink—All persons living in that territory bounded by the river on the south, the city limits on the north, the center of Drexel on the east and the river on the west.
Jones park rink—Skaters eligible to compete in the Jones park elimination tournament must live in the territory bounded by the river on the south, the city limits on the north, the center line of Drexel on the east and the center line of State-st on the west.

Third ward rink—To compete in the Third ward rink elimination tournament skaters must live in the territory bounded by the city limits on the west, the center line of State-st on the east, the river on the south and the center line of Lawrence-st on the north.

Fourth ward rink—This includes all skaters living south of the river. Fifth ward rink—All skaters living in the territory bounded on the west by the city limits, the east by the center line of State-st, the south by the center line of Lawrence-st and the north by the city limits.

ENTER ONLY ONE CLASS
Skaters must be careful to enter the classes which their ages indicate. If ages are falsified the entrant will be disqualified. Entrants in filling out the entry blanks printed on the sport page should note eligibility and should be sure to mark in the squares the classes they enter and the events in which they will participate. A skater may take part in all the events in his class but he may not enter in more than one class. Skaters will not be allowed to compete in any events in which they do not enter formally before noon of Jan. 10.

Rules governing the elimination and final tournaments are being prepared. They will be based on the regulations of the Western Skating association and provide for absolute square treatment of every entrant.

RELAY RACES
Persons entering the relay events,

INDUSTRIAL BASKET WHEEL PLAYS FIRST CONTESTS TONIGHT

Three Games On Tap At Y. M. C. A.—Tilts Are Open To Public Without Charge

What promises to be one of the most interesting basketball attractions in Appleton this winter will be started Wednesday night with the playing of the first games by the Y. M. C. A. Industrial basketball league in the "Y" gym. The interfactory league was organized several weeks ago and contains teams representing industries in the city and two Y. M. C. A. quintets.

Three games are on tap for Wednesday night. The first is between Interlake Pulp and Paper company and the Badger Furnace company. The game will start at 7:35. One hour later teams from the Kimberly-Clark and Fox River Paper company are to show their wares. The last game will be between the Y. M. C. A. teams.

Nearly all of the quints have line-ups that promise to give the caging fans a real treat in basketball. There will be no admission fees to the games and the public is urged to attend. Next week Wednesday the same teams will meet. Playing will end Feb. 23.

DEMETER-KILONIS IN RETURN WRESTLING BOUT

Milwaukee — The banner crowd of the wrestling season is expected to turn out Thursday night for the return match between Jimmy Demeter and John Kilonis, Greek rivals, which will be staged at the Gayety theater. They put up a sizzling battle at the Gayety last Thursday night with honors even at the conclusion of one hour and forty minutes of grappling. Their return collision Thursday night will be a finish affair, the pair having agreed to wrestle all night if necessary. A big crowd saw the first match and a larger attendance is anticipated for a return go.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Smith of Antigo were guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Humphrey Christmas day.

which are for four skaters, must send in the names of their three partners in the event and entry blanks must be filled out for each of the participants. Names of the four skaters in the relay should be listed on a separate sheet of paper and attached to the four entrance blanks. For example: If Jones, Smith, Brown and Black decide to enter the mile relay, each participant must fill out an entry blank and then a separate sheet should be attached stating that the four men are to form a relay team. Prizes will be given each member of the winning quartet.

This first announcement of the tournament must necessarily be sketchy but more complete details will be announced from day to day. In the meantime fill out the entry blanks and send them to the Skating Editor of the Post-Crescent. This will be one of the greatest skating carnivals in the state and should be supported by every lover of the winter sport. Remember, every skater in Appleton is invited to participate and there is no entry fee of any kind.

Sign Hill And Hindu Mat Wizard To Wrestle In Armory On Jan. 3

Goho-Gober, Former Oxford University Wonder, Will Show Wares Here—Contest Will Be Last If Fans Fail To Support Bout

Appleton wrestling fans will have one more chance to indicate if they want the sport continued in this city. Promoter Elmer Johnston of the Midwest Athletic club announced on Tuesday. Mr. Johnston has booked J. C. Goho-Gober, the great Hindu grappler, for a bout with George Hill here on the night of Jan. 3 and if this attraction is not supported it will mean the end of wrestling in Appleton as far as Johnston is concerned. He has lost heavily on the matches this year and believes it will be unwise to continue in the game if the fans do not want to see high class bouts.

WOULD BE HUMMER
The Goho-Hill match should be a hummer. Gobar is an educated Hindu who made such a showing as an amateur while attending Oxford university in England that he decided to turn professional and he came to America to take on the "big boys." Hill is one of the first to get a chance at the visitor who is beginning to be in great demand in all parts of the country.

Gobar notified Johnston on Tuesday that terms for the match with Hill were satisfactory and that the contract would be returned at once. The Hindu is required to be in Appleton two days before the bout.

SEEK STECHER MATCH
Promoter Johnston has negotiations pending for a match between Stecher and Hill but this bout will be dropped if the Gobar battle is not well attended. Only a handful saw the great match in which Hill defeated Kara Oeman early this month. Hill will leave Appleton immediately after the bout for a prolonged visit in the east where he has several matches booked. If the game is not supported here he does not intend to return to Appleton.

First prize of $100 was awarded to Miss Elsie Werth, a teacher of Pensaukee.

Left $30,000 Estate
Silas Bullard, former revisor of statutes, who died at his home at Menasha two weeks ago, left an estate of $30,000 according to his will which has just been filed for probate in Winnebago county court.

BASEBALL UNION WILL SAVE GAME, SAYS RAY CANNON

Gives Reasons Why Magnates Should Favor Organization Of Professionals

By Associated Press
Milwaukee—Better conditions for baseball and the advancement of the sport are reasons given in a statement Tuesday by Raymond J. Cannon, a Milwaukee attorney, for the formation of a professional baseball players union, which he has fostered for several months.

"The sport has suffered woefully in recent years, and it is hoped that these conditions can be improved and at the same time that the interests of the baseball player can be protected as against the great financial interests that own the clubs," declared Mr. Cannon.

AIMS OF ORGANIZATION
Mr. Cannon confirmed a number of the "aims" for professional baseball players organization to include among other things, the following:
To safeguard the right of every individual player.
To secure fair play to the players.
To represent them in dealing with the club owners.

To prevent exploitation and unfair dealing as against the players.
To secure unified action of all players on behalf of each.
To promote clean, honest, sportsmanlike professional baseball in America.

To promote the general welfare of all professional players.
To secure for the American public clean and high class sport.

To prevent clouds of suspicion against baseball, such as have arisen in recent years from arising in the future.

ZWICK TO BATTLE WITH NEARY IN MILWAUKEE FRIDAY

Sensational Kaukauna Battler On Card With O'Brien And Dundee

Milwaukee—A card de luxe has been arranged for Milwaukee boxing fans for Friday, Dec. 29, in the Milwaukee auditorium.
Tommy O'Brien, the great coast lightweight, who holds a decision over Pinkey Mitchell, will enter the ranks of the big leaguers here when he will tackle Johnny Dundee, the 130 pound champion in a ten round battle.

In support of his headline attraction, Promoter Mulken is arranging an all star card of prelims. Battling Zwick, the sensational welter from Kaukauna, Wis., who has won his last ten bouts by the K. O. route, will meet Tommy Neary in the semi. Neary is also a terrific puncher and the bout is expected to end with one or the other on the floor. Eddie Joers will engage Billy Bunch in the curtain raiser, and Harry Kahn, the promising southpaw will meet some high class Chicago youngster in the other prelim.

DEFEATS FIVE-MAN TEAM SINGLE HANDED; BLINDS AID

Changes in the standings of the Monday night league of the Elk allies resulted Tuesday night when only three teams showed up to roll out the games which fell on Christmas day this week.

The Chippewas went into a tie for first place with the Menominees as the result of a three game forfeit by the Stockbridges who failed to show up. The Chippewas have now 14 games won and 7 lost and the Menominees won 10 and lost 5.

Schmidt, the only man to show up for the locals, won the match from the Flambeaus single handed when he rolled against the Flambeaus and credited his absent teammates with 135 for each game. The Flambeaus were on top last week with 12 games won and 6 lost.

Sixteen Games Without Defeat, Newsies' Record

Such a record is the boast of the Avenue Newsies, an organization of lads who keep you supplied with the latest news and who like to do a bit of basket shooting in their spare moments. The lads average 100 pounds and organized two years ago. They won all of the games played thus far.

Their latest victim was the Black Hawk quint of the Y. M. C. A. The game was played in the "Y" gym Saturday afternoon and the Newsies romped off with a score of 16 to 4. As the result of this victory the Avenue Newsies are claiming the championship of the boys' teams at the "Y" for the second year in succession.

In Saturday's battle Sam Zussman and Eddie Kaminsky, forwards got three baskets apiece and Clarence Stoeffel, center, shot in one basket. Praise also is due to Sidney Cohen, guard, who played an excellent game. John Stoeffel, brother of Clarence, was the other guard. Altogether, the quint makes up a smooth working team. Other members of the team are Abe Cohen, Harry Kaminsky and Homer Williams.

Kenneth Busher, forward and Lawrence Christian, center, got a basket apiece for the Black Hawks. Albert

Selig, forward, Clud Thompson and Elhorn Larson, guards, are the other Black Hawk players.
An Oshkosh boys' team will play the Newsies next Saturday.

The Story of the Bayne Family An Analysis of Life

THREE weeks ago we gave you the startling information that the Chicago Evening American after raising its price to 3 cents against its fifty year old 2-cents competitor, had increased its circulation to a point where it has now the largest evening circulation of any newspaper published in Chicago.

Two weeks ago we told you how this was done and why it was possible. It was possible because the Chicago Evening American built a newspaper that appealed to the coming generation—to people under forty and those who think under forty.

We also told you our reasons for building this kind of a newspaper: First, because there are more people under forty than there are over forty. Second, because such minds are more open to new things. And third, because although such people may have less, they spend more.

In other words, we have built a newspaper for those who are coming into life,—not those who are going out. And the story of the Bayne family on this page illustrates the value of such circulation most sharply.

This paper told of events in the republican and democratic parties, of conditions in China and Moscow and of the daily happenings of the city, all very conservatively to suit the conservative Baynes, and all in small headings with small type.

But that wasn't all of the picture in the Bayne home.

The Baynes had "five kids." Much like other kids—a boy of sixteen, who had finished high school and could not wait any longer to get into the swing of life, a pretty girl of fourteen who was beginning to watch other girls who put their hair up, a gangling girl of twelve, all legs and knees and elbows and a terrible bother generally, a young hopeful of eight, whom everybody said was going to be just like his dad, and a baby boy who was no longer a baby because he was five and almost going to school.

And that was the other side of the picture. The younger Baynes were not interested in what was going on in China and Moscow. They weren't excited by the closely printed reports of the city hall, and even the pretty one didn't get any thrill out of the corner of dress patterns on the 16th page (the girl's weren't wearing them that way, anyhow, anymore). So the elder conservative Baynes had their conservative evening paper pretty much to themselves, which was what they wanted after all.

Then one evening the oldest boy, came home from work with another newspaper. He had bought it from the newsstand because he wanted to be a business man like other business men, and this was the particular paper, which after two or three experiments, he had settled upon.

It was a different looking paper. The headings were big. Their expressions were vivid. He could get his teeth into what they said and visualize what was happening. And on the sports page there was not only a picture of his favorite football star, but there was a corking story of the game he was not able to see that day, and a half page picture of the most crucial play of the game snapped just after his favorite star had bucked the line for the winning touchdown. There he lay, with just his face showing and nine men on top of him—but he was over the last white line.

This was perhaps the most thrilling moment in the young Bayne's life. Incidentally, it was a mighty good piece of photographic news on the part of that newspaper. He read the story of that game almost without breathing. It was young America speaking to young America in its own language.

A little later, the pretty fourteen-year-old has looked over his shoulders as he turned the pages and has seen some great big stunning pictures of three of the "younger social set" that all the girls were talking about at school. And a moment later she has secured part of her brother's paper.

And after that there are two evening papers in that Bayne home. Soon it comes to be an accepted fact in the Bayne home as all things are. Young Bayne even begins to take an interest in the happening in Russia and Washington, as his imagination is touched by more vivid reports; the pretty girl starts to change her mother's ideas about dress making and the kids clamor for the funnies, which seem to be drawn by people who have the same kind of funny bone as they have.

But time slips along and the next time the Elder Baynes really think about their children is when they begin to discuss the fact that the boy has been staying out night after night, and the girl is going to parties although she is too young and they feel they ought to talk to them.

And while they are still cogitating upon this subject the boy shyly appears one evening with another girl and introduces her and the two elder Baynes look at each other and a little shiver goes through them, because this was their baby, and now they know by all the signs of life that he is no longer a baby, that the man-child has grown to be a man, that another Bayne home is soon to be started and that the years have finally turned their faces to the setting sun.

WE PROMISED YOU a most intensely interesting story this week. Indeed what follows is the most interesting story in the world because it concerns five-sevenths of all humanity.

There were seven people in the Bayne family, the father, mother, and five children. They occupied a nine-room house in Chicago. They also lived in your city, by the way.

Their parents were a good example of average people. Mr. Bayne made a little money and saved a little. He invested carefully. He lived conservatively. Mrs. Bayne helped him. She was careful with her household accounts. She watched her share of the expenditures.

Their house was not just a house. It was a home. It was called the Bayne home. It was well furnished at an average cost. They had a piano, sewing machine, a phonograph, good average silverware which they had collected over a period of time. Mrs. Bayne had carefully chosen her table linens and bed linen. In short, the home was complete.

To finish the picture the Baynes read a conservative evening paper as they sat in the living room after dinner, and they made their careful necessary purchases from its columns.

Time races along about this period of life; races terribly. Almost as if it were a moving picture, the children come up into life. They reach up, stretch up, grow up and almost in a twinkling the very babies seem to begin to primp and shave.

And they're not interested in the interests of these older Baynes. They do not dress the way the elder Baynes dressed. They do not dance the way they danced. They do not even read the paper that the elder Baynes have read for so many years. They have another paper, a more vigorous paper, a paper with pictures and life and zest in it, a paper that deals vigorously with vigorous subjects, a paper that flashes its news in headlines that you get at a glance—in short, a young American paper for young America.

The next important move in the life of the Bayne family is the taking of a five room house by the elder Baynes because the older boy and girl are married and have homes of their own now. Then almost before they know it, they have a little three-room apartment because two of the others are married and only the baby is left. And the last chapter finds the elder Baynes boarding in an apartment hotel or living in a small cottage because even the baby is married and the old ones are alone.

And now there are five Bayne homes instead of one. They haven't the complete outfits of the old Bayne residence. They haven't bought their silver yet, their furniture is rather makeshift because these homes are in the making and all the appurtenances and appliances that go toward the making of a home are also in the making—very often—the money making.

But there is hope and vigor and life in these five homes of the younger Baynes where there is only retrospect and memory in the little home that is left of the elder Baynes. These young homes are going to buy this and that—are going to build so and so, are going to have this appliance and add that comfort. In short, there is nothing in the world that these five young homes are not going to have and are not getting yearly to make them perfect homes.

Every evening in these five young homes there is a newspaper just as there was in the elder home.

But it isn't the old, conservative newspaper of the elder Baynes. It is the other newspaper that the younger Baynes had learned to read and follow. It is the paper that was vigorous with the sports and thoughts and activities and filled with the news of younger America, that younger American paper for younger Americans. From its news columns, they get their news and views of life. And from its advertising columns they buy their wants. And there is much to buy because their life is new and their wants are many.

Nor do they change their paper as they go along in years, any more than the elder Baynes changed theirs. The more vigorous life of this twentieth century appeals to them in their forties as much as it did in their twenties, just as the quieter life of the latter part of the nineteenth century appealed to the elder Baynes.

And so this is the story of the Bayne family. They live in Chicago, in Terre Haute, in your city and in every city in America and the general trend of their lives is always the same. One family going out, five families coming in; one family slowly getting rid of its load, five families buying into life with all the money and energy they can control.

And in Chicago, the younger American paper that appeals preponderantly to the families of these new homes, "to the generations under forty and those who think under forty" is unquestionably the Chicago Evening American.

Certainly, there can be no doubt about buying the advertising columns of this kind of circulation for the movement of any kind of merchandise.

Please remember that twenty-four hours after you write or wire us, one of our merchandisers who knows Chicago and the Chicago market—not merely a solicitor—can be at your desk.

Boys Preparing Exhibits For 'Y' Hobby Show

The "hobby show" to be given in the boys division of the Y. M. C. A. New Year's day promises to be one of the most unique and instructive events ever put on in that department. Nine prizes, some of them valued at more than $10, are on exhibition, and it is possible the number will be doubled before the entry period ends.

The prizes are furnished by manufacturers and wholesale houses to whom J. E. Dennison, secretary, addressed a letter earlier in the month. Nearly all of them have responded to the call.

Mr. Dennison takes it for granted that each boy has a hobby, and he now has evidence that he is not mistaken. One boy has a mania for collecting stamps, another for collecting butterflies and other insects and so on down the list. Each entrant, there are already 27, will have an opportunity to exhibit his collection and tell all he knows about it to the people passing his table.

The show will be open from 3 to 5 in the afternoon and from 7:30 to 8:30 in the evening.

CUT OF EUROPEAN ARMIES WOULD AID U. S. FARMER

question of land armament is not merely a European matter. Its expense is indirectly affecting the prices of American farm products.

If Europe's currency were higher in value the purchasing power of the European people would be greater and the export trade of America would be improved—that's admitted beyond question in official quarters here.

If land armament were reduced, European budgets would be balanced and the currencies of all nations would correspondingly increase in value.

PREFERS EUROPEAN CITIES
So on the broad ground of reducing land armament, a conference on Atlantic problems—to limit construction of airplanes and submarines—and at the same time discuss land armament which wasn't treated at the Washington party a year ago is being discussed by the powers. American wants such a conference held in Europe where European problems can be better discussed and where American disinterestedness can come into full play. It is hoped here the conference will be called for London or Brussels or the Hague, and conversely it is hoped the conference will not be called for either Paris or Berlin where the atmosphere is not as conducive of reconciliation as it might be elsewhere.

An American delegation consisting of Republicans and Democrats would probably be selected by President Harding. Besides and the combined political economic problems involved, Secretary of States Hughes, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Secretary of Commerce Hoover are being talked of for at least three places on such a commission. But the idea is growing that a political conference must either precede or run concurrently with an economic conference. That's why Senator Borah's resolution even if passed may not be acted upon at once. The powers have ready approved the idea of some kind of conference—the things to be decided are when and where such conference shall be called and what shall be the scope of its discussions.

BUYING AHEAD OF ALL OTHER YULE PERIODS

Record Holiday Trade Here Indicates Betterment Of Business Status

Appleton merchants experienced perhaps their biggest holiday trade in history, according to a survey made by the local division of the chamber of commerce, and the average volume was 15 to 20 per cent ahead of the total a year ago.

Only three of the merchants interviewed representing almost every line, did not enjoy an increase over last year and there are perhaps a dozen who did the biggest business in history.

These are taken as indications that Appleton is nearer a normal business condition than it has been for more than two years. It was found that the holiday business done by some stores two years ago was larger than the 1922 total, but the 1922 sales were made at the peak of the high price period and inflation. Then came the slump which was felt in the Christmas of 1921.

MUCH GOODS MOVED
With prices much lower now than two years ago, and in many instances below those of 1921 it is believed much more merchandise was moved off the shelves than in other years. The totals taken on a basis of cash receipts would not show this, with the values down but checking of stocks reveals the extent of the trade revival.

It is with a different buying attitude that purchasers approached the counters this year, the merchants say. They did not buy goods of any price that might be asked. Values were weighed and comparisons made. The demand was for better goods. There was less of the buying for show and more requests for practical articles.

Unexpected sales were added to the totals of some stores for the reason that they were open for business on Sunday. These seemed to be tumblers of men who had procrastinated on their Christmas shopping even through Saturday night which was virtually their last opportunity to visit the stores. Something or other woke them up to the realization that Monday was Christmas. The result was that they invaded drug stores and shoe stores and other places where they had not been before. The drug stores, however, they opened their doors Sunday noon until long after their usual closing time.

JEWELERS BREAK RECORDS
Jewelers are believed to have enjoyed the biggest increase in business of any line in the city. The survey shows that three had the largest amount of holiday business in history. Two drug stores, one shoe store and one clothing store had this same experience.

The Saturday preceding Christmas, the last opportunity to shop, appeared to be the heaviest day of most of the stores. There was less shopping around. Forced to buy then or lose out people did not leave the stores until they had obtained the articles needed to complete their gift lists.

While some merchants report gains as high as 50 per cent over last year it is believed that the average is between 15 and 20 per cent, a most gratifying condition. The retailers say inasmuch as prices of goods are lower and the sales, therefore, more numerous. They find in this the most concrete illustration of restoration of buying confidence, the lack of which demoralized business.

BIG STORES PROSPER
Four department stores included in the survey all said business was much better than a year ago, with increases in sales from 15 to 20 per cent. One clothing store found its sales about the same as a year ago and the others all had increases ranging from 10 to 25 per cent.

Drug business was considered excellent by four stores with reports of other years broken by some. One store had gains of 20 to 40 per cent and one dealer conducting a sale declared his gain was 50 per cent over a year ago.

Tailoring business was good, dealers said, but the evening trade was not brisk. Hardware business made a gain of 20 to 30 per cent. Florists 15 to 25 per cent. Two chain stores found their sales totals swelled considerably.

STOCKS DEPLETED
Jewelry stores all were kept exceedingly busy and depleted their stocks more than usual. Sales gained 10 to 20 per cent and some days were record breakers in five stores.

Evidently more elaborate Christmas dinners were prepared, because six meat markets found their business much heavier. There was a big demand for poultry. Gains ranged

Everybody Worked But Father

"Father's stomach trouble seemed to be getting worse all the time and finally he had to quit work altogether. Two brothers and myself gave up school and went to work to support the family. Father had lost sixty pounds in weight and was yellow as saffron and no medicine helped him. Telling a friend about it six months ago, she advised taking May's Wonderful Remedy. I got a bottle and it helped father at once. He was able to go back to work a month later, has regained his weight and strength and eats like a wood chopper." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. For sale at all druggists. adv.

Pocket Would Hold All Mail Kaukauna Had

The Christmas mail rush in Kaukauna is decidedly over. When the mail train going north and leaving Kaukauna before 9 o'clock Tuesday morning steamed out of the station it carried one letter and one package from the Kaukauna postoffice. This was all the northbound mail the postoffice had.

ON THE SCREEN

"Sonny" With Barthelmess is Magnificent Drama of Motherless Manhood

When "Broken Blossoms" appeared we hailed Dick Barthelmess, the actor with "Tollable David," as a new star. But with "Sonny" his latest picture which opened yesterday at the Elite, we announce the arrival of an actor of unsurpassed ability in portraying human beings as they are with intense sincerity, genuine feeling and unaffected but unexcelled emotion.

"Sonny" stands as America's tribute to the after the war regeneration but it is something finer and far nobler than a mere attempt to play upon emotions. The story is human in conception and realistic in execution. When Joe Peters, the double of his dead buddy in France, takes the latter's place in the Westchester manor to keep up the deception for Sonny's blind mother, he is awed for the first time by the wonderful influence of the mother's love he had never known.

From that starting point the picture reveals possibilities for human sentiment and narrative appeal that have never before been realized upon the screen and supplying the key note to this atmosphere is the powerfully convincing interpretation given the part by Barthelmess. Of course you realize that the deception cannot last forever, but the awakening even when you expect it is so unusual and so genuine in its poetic charm that brings a tug at the heart strings that have grown taut with duce.

Pauline Garon lends the star excellent support, and Patterson O'Neil, previously seen with Barthelmess in "The Seventh Day," contributes a very fine role. Nor must mention be made of the splendid supporting cast.

Balmann's Gas Tablets in the red box package are sold by Schlitz Bros. Pure one dollar J. Balmann's (Chemist), San Francisco.

omitted of the two clever canine actors, Lassie and Waggle. The form or you'll doubtless recall as the colic of "Tollable David."

"Sonny" cannot be summarized as a "corking good picture." It is more than that. It is the drama of motherless manhood for all times.

Muse Inspired by Rheumatism Had not Denman Thompson, in 1875 then a variety artist, been attacked by rheumatism, "The Old Homestead" might never have been written. This classic, which is now showing at Fischer's Appleton theatre was originally a short sketch called "Joshua Whitcomb." Mr. Thompson, confined to his room by the malady, was unable to do his song and dance number, and he wrote the sketch "Uncle Josh" for future use. Later it was expanded into a three-act play and finally rewritten and rechristened "The Old Homestead."

Miss Mildred Thomas, a member of Beloit high school faculty is spending the holidays at her home in Appleton.
